GRAND JURY'S REPORT
MAY BE SENSATIONALResult of Inquiry Into Election Irregularity
Will Be Made to Hustings Court
To-Day—Probe Was Deep.

"Whether the public will favorably receive the report which will be made to the Hustings Court or not I cannot say, but it may rest assured that the seven men who have gone into this affair have left no stone unturned which would clear up the case to the satisfaction of every one. We went thoroughly into the matter, and the result of our sweeping inquiry will be embodied in my report."

This statement was made last night by Captain Charles F. Taylor, foreman of the grand jury which has been investigating alleged irregularities in the recent councilmanic primary in the Second Precinct in Jefferson Ward.

The grand jury began its duties last Monday and did not succeed in examining all witnesses until after 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. It was then adjourned by Judge Southall until 10 o'clock this morning, when the report of its work will be set forth in the report of Captain Taylor.

Inquiry Was Searching.

"Will your report be of a sensational or startling character?" Captain Taylor was asked.

"I cannot disclose any of the grand jury secrets or proceedings," he replied, "but I can say that our inquiry was searching and we have done our duty without fear or favor to any one. The public may rest assured that there was never a narrow or through inquiry into any matter, and every source of information which would bear upon the case was completely gone into."

"The examination of all witnesses was concluded, and the only work we now have to do is to present our findings to the court. I have prepared my report, which is of about 700 words, subject, of course, to any changes which the jury may see fit to make."

Certain rumors which indicated that the jury had succeeded in finding sufficient evidence to indict several persons for fraud in the election in the alleged ballot-juggling, Captain Taylor would neither confirm nor deny.

Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney Charles L. Page, who is representing the State in the investigation, refused to discuss the matter in any way other than to say that the grand jury had completed its work and would file its report with the court this morning when it is reconvened.

Stray Ballot Traced.

Political circles have been deeply stirred by the work of the grand jury. Among the twenty-three witnesses examined were prominent politicians, city officials, citizens, election officers and employees of the printing house which printed the ballots used. It is understood that the stray ballot which brought about the investigation was clearly traced by the jury.

There has been much speculation as to whether the grand jury confined its inquiry into the affairs of Jefferson Ward alone, there being a general impression that the alleged irregularities extended to many precincts of other wards. No definite information on this point could be had.

The appearance before the jury yesterday morning of Eugene Hechler, an employee of Ware & Duke, printers, of 17 Governor Street, the firm which printed the ballots used at the primary, was regarded as significant. It is believed that the jurors succeeded in definitely tracing some of the ballots said to have been placed in the hands of voters at the Second Jefferson by testimony offered by Hechler.

Folkes Before Grand Jury.

Just what T. W. Folkes, junior of the First Regiment Armory, told behind the closed doors of the grand jury room was a matter of much conjecture. Folkes publicly stated that he was anxious to tell the grand jury what he knew concerning the alleged primary frauds, and intimated that his testimony would not be to the best interest of men described as "higher up."

Other witnesses examined yesterday were O. A. Francis, a merchant, Isaac Held, Deputy City Treasurer, Henry Lauterbach, an employee at Oakwood Heights, and George R. Phelps, a painter.

One of the questions which it was necessary for the jury to decide was whether the City Democratic Committee consented to the circulation of official ballots. In re-examining the jury when it reconvened yesterday morning, Judge Southall asked on this point. He said that while the general election law prohibits the use of ballots outside of the polls, the practice was not illegal if it was sanctioned by the City Committee in its primary regulations.

It is the prevailing impression that the City Democratic Committee by no means considered the use of ballots by precinct and ward workers, or to permit the invasion of the precincts by candidates and workers, as was charged in street rumors and published reports which brought about the grand jury investigation.

Anybody Want to Adopt 15 Babies?

Nice Ones at Foundling Hospital
Which Will Be Given to Right People To-Day.

Ten boys and five girls, all good looking and healthy, ranging in age from 6 weeks to 18 months, are at the Foundling Hospital, Thirty-second and Clay Streets, waiting for somebody to come along and adopt them. The hospital is a chartered institution, with many prominent women on the board of managers, and with a matron and three nurses in charge. Not long ago the matron telephoned The Times-Dispatch and asked that a little notice be printed to the effect that the hospital had five babies for adoption and that anybody who was interested in good homes for these children should request for a little notice, along with the statement that the number now is fifteen.

PAT GOES, LEAVING

Popular Hotel Man Will Man-

Pat Martin, officially designated as William Patrick Martin, who decorated the front of the Jefferson Hotel in such a manner, and in a satisfactory manner, will shake the dust of Richmond from his feet June 1, and leave William Dindorfer Quade to bear the brunt of the night, while he chaperons the late of the Ocean View Hotel during the summer season. The traveling man may kick, because he does not get the state suite of the hotel at travelling man's room, the dramatic queen may rage because her faithful Pido is not allowed to feed on the Jefferson's great grub—Billy Quade will have to grin under it all, while Pat Martin hands the bathing girl and the bathroom of the Ocean View Hotel.

Pat is scheduled to be the wholesome at the Ocean View Hotel this summer, having been invited to assume full charge of the desk. This is Pat's first shot at the summer resort game, but he has relied up his sleeves and swears he is the doctor. In preparation for the strenuous work, he will go home to Gordonsville June 1 to rest his feet until June 5, when he will ascend on Ocean View.

He will return to the Jefferson Hotel on September 15 to take some of the trouble of Billy Quade's mainly shoulders. Pat Martin came to the Jefferson from the front of the Lighthouse Hotel in Norfolk, after having served his time at the Richmond Hotel in this metropolis.

PARTY LINES BAD
IN CITY AFFAIRS

Question for Voters to Decide
Is Merit, Declares Dr. Calisch in Sermon.

"There should be no Democratic and Republican parties in civic politics," declared Dr. Edward N. Calisch, speaking in Beth Abrahams Temple last night on "The Citizen and the State."

"National issues," he said, "have no bearing on municipal issues, and national political parties are out of place in city affairs. What the country needs is different and the political parties for the nation, the State and the city."

"In the election of city officials the great appeal is made on party lines. Now party organization is a very necessary adjunct of our forms of government, but it was never intended that it should become a political fetish. When a man says he has voted the Democratic or Republican ticket ever since he was able to vote, and never scratched it, it may be a sign of party loyalty, but it is more a sign of intellectual weakness. One of the best signs of our modern political situation is the fact that party lines are beginning to disintegrate. The men are looking to the individual and not to the political fetish."

Penalty for Nonvoters.

After reviewing in detail the responsibility that the citizen owes to the municipality, Dr. Calisch vigorously lashed the man who is entitled to a vote, but who refuses to exercise his franchise. He also alluded to the awakening of civic responsibility that has just touched Richmond.

"Furthermore there ought to be a penalty attached for failure to vote," he said. "If you don't pay your water bill in time, they add a penalty, and if you then neglect it, they cut the water off. I believe some sort of punishment should be devised for the citizen who does not pay the civic debt of his electoral obligation. The duty to vote is a heavier moral responsibility than that of paying the water tax. The fee of a decider is no better than the voter makes him; the stream can rise no higher than its source."

Personal prejudice and personal liking should not play a part in the election of an official, Dr. Calisch declared. A man should be chosen for his ability solely.

"What is the relation of the citizen to the State?" he asked. "Is he then the creature or the creator? The State is made up of the units of its individual citizens, but the sum total that makes up the State in its turn gives an added power and value to the individual."

"But the trouble with the average citizen is that he sees only one side of it. He is looking for what he can get, rather than for what he can give. He looks for the government to help him, rather than how he can help the government. When things go wrong, he is loud in his criticism of the work of public officials. But the question is, How much thought or time did he give to the thing or to the methods of the officials before the work was completed?"

Must Clean Its Name.

"In the twenty-first chapter of Deuteronomy there is a significant passage concerning the responsibilities of cities. The elders of the city near which a slain body had been found were held accountable for it, and they had to go through a solemn ceremony, in which they declared their innocence and guiltlessness of blame. Now when the city's honor is slain, or its interests done to death, how many of the elders of the city can in all sincerity wash their hands in Innocence, and say: 'Our eyes have not seen it, and our hands have not shed this blood.'"

"Why have their eyes not seen it? Simply because they have been too busy attending to their own private affairs that they have not given heed to the city's interests as they should. Also because many of them have had a hand, more or less directly or indirectly, in the doing of the very things that they decry."

The speaker's man thinks he is a loyal, law-abiding and ordinance-abiding citizen. So he is, as long as the laws and the ordinances do not press too closely upon his private business or pursuits. Laws are made for the other fellow to obey. Who are the withholding traffic regulations of building requirements or sidewalk incumbrance ordinances, or of speed limit, or the other many enactments that, while they do not deal with the Ten Commandments, yet are necessary for civic existence and wholesome for general happiness and safety?"

Dr. Randolph on Board.

MINE INSPECTION
LAW FAR REACHING

Actual Enforcement Will Not Begin in Virginia Until September 1.

Although legally the new mine inspection law, engineered through the late Legislature by Commissioner of Labor Doherty, becomes effective June 1, it will be September before Mr. Doherty actually enforces its provisions. The State Mine Inspector, a new official created by the mine bill, will not be appointed by the Commissioner of Labor until the middle of June or July. The inspector will fall regularly into his duties along in the autumn.

In speaking of the importance of the mining bill yesterday, Mr. Doherty said:

"In view of the fact that this is the first mine inspection bill ever enacted in Virginia, the first legal restrictions ever put upon mine operators, it would hardly be fair to treat them for preparation, and to clamp down on the mine owners three months after the enactment of the law. There are revolutionary and wholesale alterations to be made in the machinery and apparatus of mines in Virginia before any of them comply with the provisions of the bill. In fact, the Department of Mines must be very slow in the literal enforcement of the law for a few months unless many of the mine owners are to be absolutely bankrupted."

Some Radical Provisions.

"While I regard the mine act as one of the finest pieces of legislation passed in Virginia in recent years, I sympathize with the mine owners, who will have to practically rebuild their mines to conform to the law. If we wait until September before putting the law into effect, we will allow the mine operators six months time for preparation, and although there is not a mine in the State which could not pass the inspection by September 1 I believe all will be in satisfactory shape."

The act creating the Department of Mines, a comprehensive bill taking up fifteen pages of the Acts of Assembly, is modeled after the most effective mining laws in operation in other States, and will effectually safeguard the lives of the miners and the property of the mine-owners. It is believed, The State Mine Inspector, while under the supervision of the Bureau of Labor, will be an official with large powers. Under his inspecting eye must pass the whole machinery of mining, and it is within his power to hold up the operation of the mine, or to shut it down. The enactment of this bill, Mr. Doherty believes, will go a long way toward the prevention of mine horrors in Virginia.

INTO DISMAL SWAMP

Miss Ellen Glasgow Goes There for Brief View of Scenes.

Miss Ellen Glasgow leaves Richmond for Norfolk today. She will visit friends there and make a trip to Dismal Swamp, returning to this city on Tuesday next, and going to New York on Wednesday.

Miss Glasgow spent a part of yesterday looking into matters connected with the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, an organization founded here by her some years ago, and one in which she has always been deeply interested. She gave a splendid talk to members of the Equal Suffrage League in headquarters Thursday afternoon, when she related her impressions of mining, and the whole work among the children and the relation such work bears to suffrage.

S. W. Meek followed Miss Glasgow in a clear and logical address. Both speakers were warmly applauded.

Rev. W. J. Mayhew, D. D., will talk to the league on Thursday next about his work among the children and the relation such work bears to suffrage.
